Is your setup outgrowing its connectors?

Ten quick questions for brands selling across more than one store, channel or market. Tick each one that's true for your business today.

- [ ] Someone types orders from one system into another
- [ ] Part of the process runs on a spreadsheet that only one person really understands
- [ ] Month-end takes more than three days because numbers don't match between your store, ERP and finance system
- [ ] You've oversold stock that wasn't really there
- [ ] A customer has told you an order never arrived before your systems did
- [ ] You run two or more online stores or brands, but your connector was built for one
- [ ] Refunds, gift cards or multiple currencies don't flow cleanly between your store and ERP
- [ ] Your warehouse or 3PL gets orders late, or sends back stock levels that are wrong
- [ ] You've recently moved to a new ERP (or are about to), and the connections are still patchy
- [ ] One person or contractor built your integrations, and nobody else knows how they work

Your score

0 to 2 ticks

Your setup is probably fine. The standard connector may be all you need, and that's a good thing.

3 to 5 ticks

The gaps are starting to cost time. An Integration Assessment will show which ones matter most.

The workarounds are likely costing real money now, and it's worth a conversation.

Book a free one-hour Integration Assessment with one of our architects. You'll get written notes within two working days on what's working, what's at risk and what to fix first. They're yours to keep. Where the right answer is a native connector or another provider, we say so.
